solid wisdom for stronger sales

BROUGHT TO YOU BY CRYSTAL VALLEY HARDWOODS

Module 1009

2nd insights

- ✓ View every new day as a unique opportunity filled with challenges, learning, and worthwhile experiences.
- ✓ A full schedule does not automatically make a productive day; focus on using each hour with purpose.
- ✓ At day's end, ask yourself whether you used your time wisely, learned something, and accomplished something meaningful.
- ✓ You are the author of each day in your life. Make today a page you will be glad you wrote.

Climb Your Mt. Everest Daily

Every person who strives to achieve a great deal has a very special regard for one particular unit of time. Each new day represents a significant opportunity for such individuals. They are grateful for the great gift that they are about to open, for each day is certainly a unique treasure, one that will be filled with challenges, situations, and opportunities that no other day has had or ever will have!

People who are achievement-oriented recognize this fact and enjoy going boldly into each new day with a sense of anticipation and excitement! There are people who receive as much satisfaction in climbing the mountain that lies before them at the beginning of each day as those attempting to climb Mount Everest!

If you embrace each day in this fashion, you can't wait to get started, because it will be filled with so much excitement, learning, and many wonderful experiences. Just having a busy day in itself doesn't necessarily add up to much. You must try to maximize its potential!

At the end of each day, it is a good practice to assess whether you spent your time productively. It's important to ask, "Did I use my time wisely? Did I learn very much? How much did I actually accomplish?"

Each day is one separate page in your book of life. You are its sole author! Did you fill the page today the way you really wanted to? Did you do something stimulating? Did you do something exciting?

The famous movie producer-actor Sylvester Stallone once commented, "A portion of each day is given over to achieve the impossible." I invite you to climb to the top of your personal Mt. Everest each and every day!
